CHILDREN OF FAR CATHAY
A SOCIAL AND POLITICAL NOVEL OF ABSORBING INTEREST.
By CHAS. J. HALCOMBE
(Formerly of the Imperial Chinese Customs Service, Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Land" etc.)
The VOLUME which consists of 481
Pages, and includes a Sketch-Plan of historical interest showing the disposition of the Forces at the battle of Kweilin, is dedicated to Sir ROBERT HART, G.O.M.G. and Dr. A.
BENNETT.
Its description of Chinese Social Customs and Superstitions, combined with the insight it gives into political conditions in China makes
"CHILDREN OF FAR CATHAY" an excellent volume for presentation to friends at home.
Well bound in Yellow Cloth with Chinese
Emblem in Gold.
Price ... $3.50
To be obtained from Messrs. KELLY & WALSH

THE TRADE MARK ORDINANCE 1898.

APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION OF TRADE MARKS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that GODFREY PHILLIPS & SONS of 112, Commercial Street, London, England, have on the 21st day of January, 1908, applied for the registration in Hongkong in the Register of Trade Marks of the following 28 TRADE MARKS:—

THE END OF ALL

LORD ROSEBERRY DEMONSTRATES SOCIALISM. Lord Rosebery, addressing the Liberal League at the Hotel Metropole, asked it to rally to the following programme:—

Free Trade.
Hostility to an Irish Parliament.
Hostility to Socialism.
Reformed Second Chamber.

The necessity for some Imperialism, said Lord Rosebery, continued to exist. He was one of those anxious for friendly relations with not one, but with all the Great Powers of Europe. "Hear, hear." But that did not do away with the necessity for constant vigilance for the maintenance of a vast superiority at sea, and a constant vigilance for our armaments on land. If they were allowed to sink below a certain level, we should be subject to a panic unworthy of a great nation and dangerous to the very heart of the Empire.

It was necessary to hold the flag high and keep it pure and unalloyed from that Imperialism which had Protection as its basis. He did not for a moment criticise the tariffs of our self-governing Colonies, but from the point of view of Empire those tariffs were not an assistance, but an impediment, and he for one would never consent, except under the pressure of a never-forgotten necessity, to a new and onerous tariff springing from the centre of Empire itself.

There were honest movements, sincere movements, against the maintenance of armaments, but social reform was of no use unless it had protection from without. It was no use making Great Britain a Garden of Eden if their defenses let in the wolves that would menace it. There were things which might induce a departure from Free Trade policy. The enormous pressure of direct taxation might make the nation seek some relief by shifting the burden to another source of supply. The movement of the country might require to be so suddenly increased that it might be necessary for the moment to depart from Free Trade. But he only alluded to these as possibilities which ought to be kept in view by our Legislature.

They might be driven to the formidable option of Protection or Socialism; and if things did come to that pass he, for one, would have no hesitation—however disagreeable that course—of preferring Protection. Protection was a great evil; but Socialism was the end of all—Empire, religion, faith, and property.

In all the circumstances, the cry of the Liberal Party at the last election was an absurdity. Unlike other countries, we in this country had against rash schemes only the feeble barrier of an hereditary second chamber; and in these circumstances it struck him as amazing that at the time when Socialism was menacing an attempt should be made to abolish the only remaining barrier.

It was quite true that the Socialists were in a minority. He hoped they would remain in a minority. Let the teaching of history show that an active and determined minority might force its will on the majority. Did anyone suppose that the Puritans had been a majority?

He had taken it for granted that the Government meant to abolish the House of Lords. ("No.") If their plan had been in operation there would now have been an Irish Parliament sitting in Dublin. Was that Liberalism? It was not the Liberalism he was reared in.

"When the time comes—for a choice between Socialism and Protection—what I may call the hideous alternative—then Liberalism will have to look out for itself. I look to the present Government as our bulwark against Socialism. Loud cheers." I differ from it in regard to a Second Chamber and the Scottish Land Bill. But those two measures are not likely to pass, and in no respect interfere with my confidence in the Government. I see there an assembly of earnest, able, courageous men, and I rejoice to think that we have such a body to stand between us and a great evil. A time may come when all the forces that oppose Socialism and oppose Protection may have to unite. Sure I am that we cannot too carefully strengthen and reorganise such a force as this."

SLACKENING TRADE.

MR. ASQUITH'S EXPLANATION.

Mr. Asquith, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking to the Oldham Chamber of Commerce said it was natural that on an occasion like that they should look back for a year and take stock of the situation. There were, he supposed, no business men in this country who were not conscious at this moment of a pause in what for the last five years had been an almost uninterrupted expansion in the volume of the world's trade. It was not, he thought, till very near the close of last year that the causes, he would not say of depression, but of slackening activity, began to make themselves felt. They were three. First and foremost there was a scarcity of money, which was itself the effect of the unprecedented trade expansion of previous years; and that scarcity, and the evil and various consequences which followed, for a time followed it, made themselves most notably felt where one found, side by side, defective currency and banking system and undue strain on the machinery of the world. The commercial community throughout the civilised world was so intimately bound together by a community of interest that when one member suffered the whole body, more or less, suffered. While we might say with just pride that our own monetary and banking system, weathered the storm in a most seaworthy fashion, and while we supplied the bulk of the gold needed elsewhere, and while a 7 per cent. Bank rate was a serious inconvenience and hindrance to business, however well conducted, yet we went through that trying experience not only without disaster, but without serious difficulty. (Cheers.) Next he would place among the causes of slackening activity of business the shortage last year of crops, and particularly of food stuffs. Wheat prices were higher at the end of 1907 than in any year since 1893. If we took the average town throughout Great Britain and Ireland and compared the retail price of the 4lb. loaf at the beginning and end of the year, an average rise—in some cases it was greater—of very nearly a penny would be found. There was also a considerable rise in price of crops like barley and maize, rice, and other food stuffs. A rise of that kind, large in amount and sudden in occurrence, told necessarily upon the activity of business and the profitability of its results. Lastly, there was a corresponding and simultaneous rise in the price of some of our most important raw materials, particularly coal. Despite all these causes 1907 was a year of almost unexampled trade activity in the United Kingdom and throughout the world. Nowhere was that more conspicuously the case than in cotton spinning. Trade during the past year had been thoroughly healthy in the United Kingdom. There had been nothing in the nature of wild speculation, and now that the price of money had reached or nearly reached its normal level, although it was foolish to prophesy and having tried his hand once or twice at the task he was not going to do it now—(laughter)—yet he said it was difficult to discern any cause or any symptom of growing or continuous depression.

On Mr. Asquith resuming his seat, a lady in evening dress, seated near other ladies in the balcony, rose and cried out, "Mr. Asquith, I have not interrupted you, but what about votes for women?" This was followed by shouts of indignation from the company. There was much confusion, and as she refused to leave an attendant lifted her in his arms, amid much laughter, bore her, kicking and struggling, from the balcony.

FIRE ON A STEAMER.

VALUABLE WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY. The dramatic rescue of 600 passengers from the Soudan steamer Providence while sailing within a few miles of the spot where the ill-fated General Slocum was burnt to the water's edge with a loss of 1,000 lives, is credited to wireless telegraphy, says a New York message. Fire broke out on the main deck of the Providence, which belongs to the Fall River Line, just before dawn, while the steamer was off Execution Rock, near City Island, on her way to New York. The flames spread rapidly, and smoke quickly filled the upper decks, awakening the 600 passengers, many of them women and children.

Captain Asquith decided to take no chances. The Richard Peck of Newhaven was two miles ahead. She was summoned by wireless telegraphy, and was signalled to stand by. The two steamers were soon brought together, gangways were run from boat to boat, and all the 600 passengers were transferred from the smoke-filled Providence without mishap.

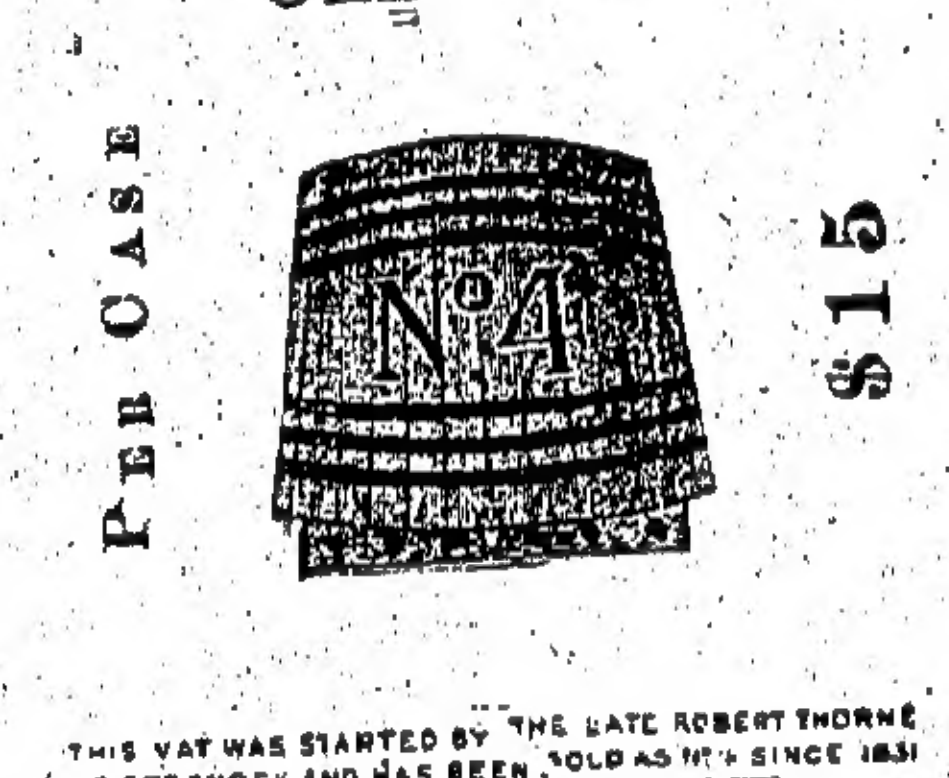

The first light of dawn was then breaking. Some of the Providence's women passengers grew hysterical, and all were pretty nervous. The crew of the Providence had a hard fight with the blaze, but succeeded in extinguishing it after the passengers had left. The way in which the fire was handled and the orderly transfer of the 600 passengers furnished a gratifying topic of conversation to steamboat men today. The results showed the effectiveness of the fire drill, which has been regularly called on board the boat, and the fact that no one suffered injury demonstrated that the big crowd was managed in a systematic and clear-headed manner. The party played by wireless telegraphy was a new reminder of the value of modern methods and inventions.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY

TRADE MARK
THERAPION
The most famous and highly popular remedy, used in the most celebrated hospitals of London, Boston, New York, and elsewhere, combines all the desiderata to be sought in a medicine of the kind, and surpasses everything hitherto known.
THERAPION No. 1. Remarkably short time, often a few days only, removes all discharges from the urinary organs, effectually superseding infection, the cause of which does irreparable harm by laying the foundation of stricture and other serious diseases. In dysentery, piles, and irritation of the lower bowel, cough, bronchitis, asthma, and some of the most trying complaints of this kind, it will be found astonishingly efficacious, affording prompt relief, and clearing the system of all morbid humors.
THERAPION No. 2. For the treatment of rheumatism, gout, blisters, pains and swellings of the joints, neuralgic symptoms, gonorrhea, and all diseases for which it has been too much a fashion to employ mercury, sarsaparilla, etc., to the destruction of the teeth and ruin of health. This preparation cleanses the whole system through the blood, and thoroughly removes every element of disease from the body.
THERAPION No. 3. For the treatment of nervous debility, sleeplessness, and all the depressing consequences of early error, excess, and indulgence in unwholesome habits, it restores the system to its normal strength and vigor to the debilitated.
THERAPION. It is sold by the principal Chemists and Merchants throughout the world. Price in England 5/6 & 4/6. In London, State which of the three numbers is required, and observe above Trade Mark, which is a facsimile of word "THERAPION" as it appears on the British Government Stamp (in white letters on a red ground) called to every package by order of His Majesty's Home Commissioners, and without which it is a forgery.
Sold by all Pharmacies and Druggists.
